WORK SESSION

A copy of prepared material has been recorded as Communication & Petition Number 21214 dated April 19, 2017.

The Dayton City Commission met in a Work Session on Wednesday, April 19th at 4:39 p.m., prior to the regularly scheduled City Commission meeting. The meeting was held in the City Manager’s Large Conference Room, located in City Hall. Mayor Whaley, Commissioners Mims Joseph and Shaw were present. Mr. Kery Gray, Director, City Commission Office, and Ms. Rashella Lavender, Clerk of the Commission, were also in attendance.

Ms. Shelley Dickstein, City Manager, Ms. Tammi Clements, Deputy City Manager, Mr. Joe Parlette, Deputy City Manager, Mr. Richard Biehl, Chief of Police, Lt. Colonel Maris Herold, University of Cincinnati Police Department, Dr. Tamara Madensen, University of Nevada, and Mr. Blake Christenson, Senior Crime Analyst with City of Cincinnati Police Department, were the presenters. An overview was provided regarding police enforcement strategies.

Chief Biehl explained the importance to be responsive to crime issues impacting the neighborhoods. He said the gun crime reduction strategy goal is 20 percent reduction in violent crimes and ten percent reduction in violent crimes with injuries (injuries are up 20 percent since 2014). The Community Initiative to Reduce Gun Violence (CIRGV) focuses on crime reduction patrol through person and place-based strategies. He said in an effort to enhance prevention strategies an internal alignment was proposed to expand the operation through incorporating a crime reduction model utilized in a neighboring city.

Dr. Madensen said crime is concentrated across offenders, victims, and places that are typically networked. She said persistent crime hotspots result from overlapping networks. Most violent crimes, across any city, occur in small identifiable micro-locations. She said in Dayton, 1.3 percent of Dayton’s total land mass amounts for 7.1 percent of shots fired calls-for-service, 13.9 percent of robberies, 17.2 percent of firearms offenses, and 38.6 percent of shootings.

Mayor Whaley asked if this is a typical crime pattern in other cities.

Dr. Madensen said Dayton’s statistics are comparable to other cities.

Dr. Madensen said Dayton’s traditional approach was aligned with offender focused strategies; however, the proposed Dayton model involves a community focused effort of violence reduction through city driven tactics by leveraging city resources and solutions, dismantling criminal infrastructures, and ensuring long-term sustainability through building community resiliency.

She said criminal activity infrastructures are defined as:

- Crime Sites (micro-places where crime occurs such as public streets)
- Convergent Settings (routine public meeting places such as parking lots/parks)
- Comfort Spaces (private offender staging and lounging locations such as rental and vacant properties)
- Corrupting Spots (crime places that create crime at other places such as crumbling structures and/or store fronts)

Lt. Colonel Herold explained the examples of a city's response related to place-based investigations. She said the city's role is instrumental and key to the success of crime reduction with the place-based strategy that involves various departments. She reviewed the City of Cincinnati's model and highlighted the results.

She said in 2013 the steps that were taken to address a problem area included: permanent on-street parking restrictions, land maintenance/owner compliance, code enforcement/dumpster-vendors, blighted property demolition, light tower intervention, fencing/territory reinforcement, and space reactivation/public playground. Since that time, the statistical result reflects that the number of shooting victims ranged from nine down to five in 2016.

The model proposed for the City of Dayton incorporates internal partnerships involving key departments within the organization that are necessary to implement the violence network investigations.

She explained the steps necessary for implementation of Dayton's place-based investigations (violent offender territories):

- Identify locations (identify long-standing "chronic" violent locations)
- Proximal Places/Prolific Offenders (investigate networks of contributing proximal places and prolific offenders)
- Disrupt Networks (disrupt these networks through an integrated city-sponsored effort)
- Establish Resiliency (monitor and sustain crime reductions by building victim/resident/business resiliency)

The overall goal of the violence reduction strategy is to sustain violence reduction in chronically violent locations, improve resident safety and community vitality, and attract strategic investment and community redevelopment.

Commissioner Mims inquired about the timeframe to implement the model.

Chief Biehl said the City of Cincinnati took six months, but potentially may be achieved in as little as 60 days.

Commissioner Joseph asked about the process of identifying problem areas and the need for incorporating zoning of roadways and sidewalks.

Dr. Madensen said it will be discovered in the investigation.

Commissioner Shaw noted his support for the model.

Mayor Whaley noted her appreciation for the information that was shared.

Traffic Safety Enforcement Systems and Related Services

Chief Biehl said the traffic safety enforcement system began in 2002 and ended in 2015. Since that time, there has been a 40 percent increase in crashes, 45 percent in traffic deaths, and the incidents are continuing to rise. To address the spike in crashes, re-implementation of the safety enforcement system is recommended.

He said ten fixed systems, six handheld devices and two trailer/portable units were requested in the Request for Proposal (RFP) process with the option to expand if needed.

The fixed site selection will be based on a three year review of crashes at the top intersections (required by law). An analysis will be performed on the type of crashes at these intersections, and the data will be used to determine if a red light or speed enforcement camera would be beneficial at these locations. The handheld and trailer usage will be based on citizens' complaints in neighborhoods or area officers' request.

Based on current law, a Dayton Police Officer must be present at photo enforcement locations. Officers will enter an ID number on the device key pad when enforcement begins and concludes. There will be enforcement at different system locations on a scheduled basis, with an estimated time of eight hours per system, per week, subject to staffing issues and operational considerations.

He explained that the first thirty days are required to be a warning period for fixed sites. Warnings will be mailed to violators.

Prior to establishing site locations, a public information campaign is required by law to inform motorists about the use of traffic law photo monitoring devices and noting the locations. Also, the week prior to using handheld and mobile units, notification will be issued through social media informing the community about the locations.

As required by law, there is a requirement to publish at least one notice in a local newspaper of general circulation the City's intent to utilize traffic law photo monitoring devices and the date of when the first system will become operational.

The Work Session concluded at 5:38 p.m.
